I just replied to your thread on this subject, but for reference here's the same reply:

You're free to distribute GameSave Manager via third party means provided you make it clear you're "mirroring" the download, as well as not putting the download behind a "paywall". The GameSave Manager files should be provided as-is (i.e how they were downloaded from here). You're free to include your own files, however (such as a readme). Preferably the GameSave Manager files should be separated from any of your own files via a nested folder or archive.

With regards to your issues downloading, if you hit me up on Discord (Discord Invite) sometime we can try and find a solution for that.

Either way, consider this permission to distribute GameSave Manager as stated above.
