

Subject: Re: ReShade: Redistributing reshade

From: ReShade <info@reshade.me>

Date: 12.01.2019, 03:34

To: Kim <kim.nordmo@gmail.com>

Hey,

Thanks for asking. The notice does include the ReShade executable, yes. However, I'm fine with your specific case distributing it despite that, as long as there is a clearly visible link to the ReShade website in the package description.

Thank you!
crosire

----- Original Message -----

This is an enquiry email via <https://reshade.me/> from:
Kim <kim.nordmo@gmail.com>

Hello,

So I have a question regarding the wording regarding the sharing of binaries or shader files on the download page.

It explicitly says `Do NOT share the binaries or shader files. Link users to this website instead.` , from what I believed this is for any binary files that are installed when patching a game?

The reason I'm asking is because I'm the maintainer of the chocolatey package (which embeds the executable inside the package) responsible for installing reshade on a users computer, and one of those users reported that they believe that note also means the reshade executable as well.

(in case you haven't heard of chocolatey, it is a package manager similiar to `apt`, `yum` and more. Only for windows instead).

Best Regards
Kim N.